JURY GETS LIGHT ON INDICTMENTS

True Bills Expected To-Day After Charge by Justice Goff.

Supreme Court Justice Goff to-day charged the special Grand Jury that has May 8 to bring indictments. This is a victory over District-Attorney Jerome by former Assistant District-Attorney James W. Osborne, who, as a Special Deputy Attorney-General, has been presenting the case of the people against the American Ic Company.

Early this afternoon Foreman Evard Jansen Wendell submitted two questions to Justice Goff as follows: 'If two men entering into a contract!

one agreeing to sell his business to the other, with all the machinery and product of such business, agreeing under the terms of the contract not to enter again into that business in this community for a certain time, is that under the law a crime in restraint of

The Court said in part:

"I charge you that that is a contract in restraint of trade, and it comes within the law on the subject. You have no concern whatever as to whether such a contract benefits or injures individuals of the community in general. You have no concern whether or not such things mentioned in the contract are necessities of life. If the contract was in an isolated case it might do no harm, but if there are hundreds of such contracts, and the business is given over under these contracts, harm is done and the person so doing violates the law."

Indictments are expected from the Grand Jury room late this afternoon.

All that night her father and mother searched the district, aided by the police, but no trace of the little girl could be found. Since then they have visisted all the hospitals in vain.

For four days Mrs. Mooney has been fighing off the fear that Mamle fell into the East River. To-day she gave up all hope of finding her alive.
